WAS SURPRISED.

"That must be the place. It answers the description they gave me. If he doesn't read me at the first opening, then I'll feel pretty safe, despite the old gentleman's crusty temper."

The traveler rode up to the farmhouse, his eyes fixed upon a man who stood in the Goorway. "Good evening, sir," called out the young man as the other made no move ment. "I presume this is where Mr. Merrill lives?" He does on Sunday. Hest of the week Uncle Lije runs the place. Ef you want to see me, you'd better 'light ouenn hitch. Supper's jest ready, an I don't wait for no man," and so speaking the farmer turned his broad back and disappeared within the house. The subdued clatter of knives and forks met his ear, and through the long half there came an appetizing odor of hot food. His hesitation was brief. A long ride had made him hungry, and literally fol-

The farmer's wife, two sons and a daughter were present, but only one of these won much attention from the travelec, and before that silent meal was ended he caught himself acknowledging that he had never beheld a prettier, more graceful girl than rosy checked, bright eyed, curly headed Maria Merrill. "Jim," said Uncle Lije, at length arising, "you go put up the stranger's hoss. Mar!", you go fetch the doin's in t'other room, an you, stranger, come along o'

The young man obeyed. In a few moments Maria followed them, bearing pipes, homemade tobacco, glasses and a bottle of whisky. Placing these upon the table, she quickly vanished. "Stop thar," exclaimed Uncle Life in his deep, echoing voice as the stranger was about to speak, and pouring out a glass of whisky he pushed it forward.

finshed in upon the prisoner as Uncle Lije entered, necompanied by Maris, bearing a candle. "You've woke up, hey?" he said, with a harsh laugh, bending over the young man. "I'm right glad o' that, for it'll eave me trouble. Now your legs is free. Git up and travel."

Two others, their garments torn and blood stnined, were lying upon the ground youngest son, crouched between them, a cocked revolver in his hand.

"You don't 'pear to like the way your speculation's turned out," laughed Uncle Lije. 'Never mind. Than's two on 'em yender'll be able to keep you company in pulling hemp soon as the neighbors git here.

"Good heaven! You don't think I was in league with those men?" cried the young man as a sudden light burst upon his head. "And that's why-Uncie Lije, I'm Will Cook, your nephew, son of Aunt Nancy's brother. Feel in my breast pocket. I've got letters for you, only I thought I would surprise you all and have a little fun first by playing stranger." Upcle Lije was too immensely disgusted with himself to tell the story, but little

Tom quickly supplied the deficiency. It seemed that he had been out gunning, and running a squirrel into its hole concealed himself in a dense clump of bushes to await the animal's reappearance. While waiting he heard volces, and the first words he caught caused him to crouch still closer. Two men were slowly passing by, and their words revealed a bold plot to rob Uncle Lije, who was known to have sold a valuable herd of cattle two days before. Not only did Tom hear this, but he heard that one man was to drop in at the house, and if possible obtain a night's lodging, thus making it easy for him to admit his confederates at the right hour. An hour later Will Cook made his appearance and received the treatment intended for the spy. Just why the plan was changed was never known, for the

HIS FATE.

How a Mole on a Beautiful Face Led to a Doctor's Downfall.

Mustapha approached the carpet of justice, dragging with him a man with a look of selemn and impossible wisdom, like that worn by cows, jackasses and some others of the arimal kingdom. With them came a woman attired in mourning garments and from whose eyes the tears were

"What is the matter here, Mustapha" inquired the cadl.

"This woman saith that she hath been grievously wronged by this doctor," replied Mustapha.

'Let us hear your tale, woman," said the cadl. "Allah Kebur-God is greatand justice shall be done."

Know, O source of all wisdom, that I have a daughter who was beautiful as an houri in paradise, save that she had a mole on her left cheek. This doctor said that for 5 shekels he would remove the mole, and that her cheek would remain as the skin of the peach, soft and rosy. I procured the 5 shekels for blin, and he put some fluid on the mole which caused a burning and an inflammation that afterward enlarged and burst, so that now my daughter is left hideous as the mother At of Shlian.

"Be chesm-on my eyes be it! Is this true, man of pills and powders?" "It is, O lord of mercy. But I did not know that this would happen, and I am ready to give back to the woman her 5 shokels. "

"You did not know? Now, by the sa-cred sandwich that the prophet ate at Aden, how dared you undertake on the person of a true believer a thing of which you knew not what might be the consequences?" "I guessed that it would come out all right, your highness." Well, you guessed wrong, as you shall presently see. Where did you learn to you were allowed to ply your trade!"

"Six months, O fountain of wisdom." "Can you read or write?" "No, your highness." "What did you study at the university?"

"We had ten lectures on materia medica, ten on physiology, ten on anatomy, ten on pathology, and the professors vivisected some 300 dogs for our entertainment." "Mustapha, did you ever see the wom-an's daughter?"

'I have, your sublime highness."

hath said?" 'Yes, truly, your highness.' "Allah knows that beautiful faces are none to plentiful, slave. You shall be punfalled not only for decreasing their number, but for pretending to know how to heal when you have learned only how to kill.

Mustapha! 'Here, proprietor of all knowledge." "Do you go to this man's house and selze all the medicine and instruments therein. Then let him be put on a platform in the public square, and each day let him be given a generous portion of his own medicine, and let each of his instruments in turn be tried upon him. If by any chance he shall survive this, then

"I kiss the dust of your sublime feet, O creator of justice," said the woman.

"Allah Kebur—God is great!" remarked the cadi as he retired to his harem. "Mohammed is the most high prophet, and

Not Always Safe. A dudish looking party in a long tailed overcoat and turned up trousers was pick-ing his way gingerly over a muddy down town crossing the other afternoon when a rakish looking party in a rain coat and rubber boots caught sight of him.

The spectacle of a live walking dude appeals irresistibly to the average man's sense of the ludicrons, and the rakish looking citizen, imitating the galt and general bearing of the other, staiked along solemply by his side a block or two in apparent unconsciousness of the fact that was creating a sensation and attracted the amused attention of everybody on the side-rifle, followed by another and another, mingled with wild cries and yells of pain and anger.

In going over another moddy crossing the rakish looking party, as if by accident, tripped the dude. The latter narrowly escaped a fall, and as he recovered himself he awang his right. It landed squarely on the jaw, and his tormentor went down as if a pile driver had struck him. You can spe me, don't you know," he drawled, but, baw Jove, you mustn't monkey with me!"—Chloago Tribune.
